Multidimensional EPR study of electrochemical Faraday-cup based flow cell for the determination of heavy metal ions in real samples. A rapid and sensitive method for the determination of $Fe(3+)$ by EPR spectrometry has been developed on the basis of flow-through electrochemical cell using flow cell with 3-dimensional flow-channel structure. This cell was fabricated by attaching a thick screen-printed conductive carbon rod electrode and a straight quartz tube (~25 mm) as the central cavity to the inlet capillary tube. $Fe(3+)$ was electrochemically reacted by reduction at the tip of the carbon rod electrode. The resulting $Fe(3+)$ produced a Faraday electrode potential for the separation of $Fe(2+)$ at the carbon rod electrode and the collected $Fe(2+)$ was introduced into the central cavity of the flow cell. The $Fe(2+)$ was subsequently oxidized to $Fe(3+)$ at the working electrode and then detected by EPR spectrometry. The linear range for the determination of $Fe(3+)$ was 0.0-50.0 microM with a detection limit of 0.41 microM (3sigma). It was used for the determination of $Fe(3+)$ in pharmaceutical and metallic salts samples./* * Copyright 2013 ZXing authors * * Licensed under the Apache License, Version 2.0 (the "License"); * you may not use this file except in compliance with the License. * You may obtain a copy of the License at * * * * Unless required by applicable law or agreed to in writing, software * distributed under the License is distributed on an "AS IS" BASIS, * WITHOUT WARRANTIES OR CONDITIONS OF ANY KIND, either express or implied. * See the License for the specific language governing permissions and * limitations under the License. */ @interface ZXAztecEncoder : NSObject @end [Surgical treatment of chronic hepatitis B - overview of indications and surgical techniques].
