Whether you're in your 50s or your 20s, you've likely dealt with the question of whether or not you want kids at some point in your life. But before you go off to make one final attempt to get your parents to understand the concept of personal space, we have some great news: You can actually have kids even if you're in your 30s or 40s. In fact, having kids doesn't have to mean that you'll suddenly become a raging lunatic after retirement. It can still be a great way to leave your mark on the world — by leaving your kids with a bit of your DNA. Even if you're in your 30s or 40s,

It turns out that women in their 40s are actually more fertile than women in their 20s or 30s. In fact, it's been estimated that women in their 40s produce up to 25 eggs per month. Women in their late 50s and early 60s also make good candidates for getting pregnant — they're still fertile and have enough time to have a healthy baby. After all, women who've reached menopause are only fertile for a limited time each month. Once they've given all the eggs they have to their body, it can take up to a year before they start getting pregnant. If
