Thanks to the following people for testing and support: [?] Idris Ahmad [?] Hamed Annabi [?] Talat MowjoodSlideshow (2 images) DUBLIN (Reuters) - Irish singer Damien Dempsey has won a court appeal to keep his award winning song “Stand by Your Man” out of the public domain, after at least one of its writers signed away rights to the tune in exchange for cash. The appeal from Dempsey’s record label, Universal Music, was filed in the High Court in Dublin on Monday. “Stand By Your Man”, which the singer wrote and originally released in 2016 to raise awareness about domestic violence against women, won the 1992 Eurovision Song Contest. At a hearing on Thursday, the High Court upheld an earlier ruling by the Commercial Court that the singer's lyrics should not be made available on Spotify and other streaming sites. However, the High Court said that the rights for the song had been transferred to Universal Music Ireland Ltd in a settlement struck in November 2017 with Leslie Duffin, one of its writers. The court heard Universal Music Ireland did not raise an objection to the settlement when the agreement was signed, but instead that there were significant financial benefits and that the "nature of the agreement was such that it could not be challenged". The business listed in Ireland was formed by a Delaware company, among others, and the court was told that Duffin had received fees, royalties, and a share of future income from "Stand By Your Man"  09e8f5149f
