"David will be on 'Tonight,' Jimmy will be on 'Late Show,'" a source close to Letterman told CNN late Saturday. "He and Jimmy are planning to do things together." According to the source, Kimmel and Letterman had a reunion of sorts earlier this week. Letterman said he and Kimmel had a blast talking about the transition last night on "Late Show," an insider told CNN. "They both had a great time and Jimmy told David he wanted to talk about it again," the source said. Letterman and Kimmel recently met up to reminisce about their show's past "25 years," a source said. "They both remember it fondly. Jimmy was upset that David canceled the episode, and was angry and hurt," the source added. Letterman canceled the "Lampoon" hour on Wednesday night after Kimmel's sweet tribute to his "three favorite words in the world" — "you're welcome" — so that the night could be given to his late-night rivals, Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert. Sources said Letterman was back on camera on Thursday morning, and he and Kimmel addressed the "Lampoon" cancellation over the weekend. But the source said Letterman was also "gutted" about the departure, telling Kimmel he "has to make the show go on." "

Q: php Regex find, if find match return string I have a string like this... $str = "Hi, this is the best site I found all of time."; I found a website that generates a bunch of random strings, on the page they have this string... Hi, this is the best site I found all of time! I want a php regex to find the string and return all of the 'all of time', is this even possible? What have I tried.. I did get it to sort of work.. heres what I have $str = "Hi, this is the best site I found all of time."; preg_match("/all of time/", $str, $output); I am trying to get the string "all of time" and I can pass that into a function that will output the needed information; but it is not returning the $all of time at all.. A: You can write a PHP function to do exactly this: $str = "Hi, this is the best site I found all of time."; function split_message($message) { $result = preg_split("/(?
