Letter of the Day: The 2014 Election Start with the usual statistic: The election is now less than two years away. The rare President and Democratic Congress that result from such a swift timetable likely won't last even that long. There's also another statistic that's much less encouraging, yet is just as old: The average Congress has lasted nearly a decade. Much of that time is spent limping through the legislative process, with occasional flare-ups of passion, and lots of time wasted in the process. As yesterday's Daily Briefing Editor Thomas Mann once put it, a third of the time
