We hold an annual conference and symposium and a monthly seminar and meeting of the leading international wheat weed scientists. Scientists from over 25 countries attend our annual conference with the major topic being weed biology or integrated weed management. The conference programme varies over the course of the year with a conference in May focusing on problems of grasses and a conference in July concentrating on weeds of cereals and oilseeds and their management. Two sessions each year include leading Australian and New Zealand scientists and two end-of-season conferences have Australia-wide participation.Q: Why does multiplying the x-coordinate by the y-coordinate give an incorrect result? I'm trying to multiply the y-coordinate by the x-coordinate and get a new y-coordinate. To do this I multiply the y-coordinate by the x-coordinate and then add another x-coordinate to it to give the result. However, the new y-coordinate is wrong. The y-coordinate goes down the middle (at the middle) but goes to the bottom instead of the top. Why is that and how can I fix it? A: This has happened to me in the past. In Open GL, you need to multiply a position by a scale instead of adding the scaled position. This is because OpenGL knows that the current coordinate system is actually a 2D coordinate system: The Cartesian coordinate system we are used to is: 0 0 0 is at the top -1 1 1 is at the bottom -1 -1 1 is left -1 -1 is right 0 -1 is behind 0 -1 0 is in front -1 -1 is somewhere However, the 2D coordinate system for an 2D app is: 0
