Corticotropin-releasing factor-induced locomotor activation: block by the CRF antagonist alpha-helical C-terminal CRF. We have previously shown that the corticotropin-releasing factor (CRF) mediates some of the central actions of stress hormones in the intact rat. To determine which CRF functions are present in the brain, the activity of a highly selective CRF antagonist, alpha-helical C-terminal CRF (alpha-hCT), was examined. Male rats were tested for locomotor response to s.c. injections of CRF and its C-terminal fragment, alpha-hCT. Animals were pretreated with 5 microg of the peptide or saline to elicit a response. Other rats received microinjections of CRF, alpha-hCT, and then the CRF antagonist (alpha-hCT administered first and CRF administered second) into the rostral ventrolateral medulla (RVLM). Central administration of CRF and alpha-hCT elicited comparable increases in locomotor activity. By contrast, pretreatment with alpha-hCT attenuated the locomotor response to subsequent injection of CRF into the RVLM. The antagonistic effects of alpha-hCT may be the result of an antagonistic action at the nucleus tractus solitarius (NTS) or site(s) upstream of the NTS, an action at the locus coeruleus (LC), a combination of the two, or some effect peripheral to the central nervous system. The actions of alpha-hCT suggest that the CRF receptor associated with the locomotor response to CRF can function with both CRF and alpha-hCT.

Q: Facebook JS SDK event.wait(100) not working after FB.login() I have an issue with the Facebook JS SDK. When I call FB.login(function(response) {...}), the function is called and no big deal. However, when the page is finished loading, I try to use FB.getLoginStatus, and the FB.Event.wait() event is not working. My code is like this: FB.Event.subscribe('login.completed', function (response) { $('#login').modal('hide'); ... FB.Event.wait(function(){ FB.getLoginStatus(function(response){ console.log(response); }); }); }); I tried to use FB.Event.observe(...) but Facebook told me that I must use FB.Event.subscribe(...). I'm so sorry for this issue, but I can't find a solution to this problem. Thank you in advance. A: This issue was resolved. My issue was not caused by the `FB.login(...)` or `FB.Event.wait(...)`. The issue is at the simple login URL. When I typed the simple login URL, the `FB.Event.wait(...)` function was not worked. However, when I used the app login URL, the `FB.Event.wait(...)` was working. I think the reason is that there is no response at the simple login URL. So I used the app login URL.
