This technology emulates the Player Impact Engine used in real matches, which means that on-field moments, such as tackles, shots and headers, react differently depending on who is involved and the final position of the player. The team approach is visible in FIFA's high-speed movements. Players sprint and perform cuts and shuffles to create momentum and movement, giving EA a realistic look at high-pressure situations. This results in players that can transition to any style of gameplay, from dribble-based play to one-on-one contests. This system helps to make the "Football DNA" of FIFA 22 much more realistic, and adds to the player-attitude system that builds on the success of FIFA 19's successful Player DNA. FIFA 22's most noticeable new feature is the "Advanced Transfer Market System." This system is fully 3D, allowing players to trade, sell and buy players directly within the game. While it's similar to the real-life transfer market, it's the first time this ambitious and complex system has appeared in a video game. This system in FIFA 22 is also the most realistic transfer market to date, with transfer fees, medical costs and foreign body transfers factored in. Through the transfer market, FIFA 22 allows players to build their squad throughout the entire season, and use the transfer market to take over other clubs. The FIFA Ultimate Team (FUT) Packs of FIFA 22 are largely unchanged, though they have been rebalanced to give players more options, and there are new coins that players can use to buy packs. The FUT Packs of FIFA 22 are largely unchanged, though they have been rebalanced to give players more options, and there are new coins that players can use to buy packs. AI improvements in FIFA 22 The AI in FIFA 22 has been significantly improved in comparison to FIFA 19, which allowed for in-depth game modes, such as pre-season and transfer market challenges. However, this created a greater demand for more game modes, and FIFA 22 is going to have a higher number of game modes than last year's game. To cater to this, the game now features the FIFA Ultimate Team Pro Clubs, which are fully customisable and offer the ability to compete in classic and brand new game modes including a Division Rivals Tournament. The Ultimate Team Pro Clubs also work within the Transfer Market as well, and allow players to

FIFA Ultimate Team consists of two modes. Seasons can be played with or without a coach. With a coach, you can play through a shortened season, with the final club logos unlocking as they are earned. Or you can play a full season without a coach. Winning in Ultimate Team earns points, which earn you packs. Packs can be bought or earned by playing Seasons and Ultimate Team matches respectively. Ultimate Team Play the coin toss to determine who will be the first to kick-off or, when there is no coin toss, you can select specific players for each team to make things even more interesting. Choose to take a single shot with your goalkeeper, or opt for a "Flaming Arrow" pass that sends the ball to a teammate behind the opposing defence. Or, if you want to add some flair, have a looper from midfield send the ball over the top. FUT head coach for Seasons has been moved from the men's tournament to a head coach for FIFA 22. Rivals Series - You can play up to four matches each year with three of your six favorite team rivalries; England v. Italy, Germany v. France, Argentina v. Brazil, Brazil v. Spain, Real Madrid v. New Pass the Ball animation - A new pass the ball animation is used when players successfully pass the ball to a teammate. The animation will also play when a player accidentally passes the ball. Tweaked Goalkeeper Deflections - Defenders now try to block shots more aggressively, meaning kick offs are more likely to be returned.
