In the manager's office, the players are given their football manager interview. Ironside is the fifth of the ten, and his outgoing manager, Benham, tells him to just be himself, and try his best. After that, Tom informs the players how he will be handling their team in todays match, which is against a club called Stocksbridge United. Tom explains that he will be picking eight out of the eleven first team players, and it is down to which ones he picks to travel with him. A man with two Premier League winners medals in his cabinet, he's definitely got a bit of swagger about him. His assistant manager, while equally as decorated with a World Cup and two European Championships, can't boast the same moments of glory. This means that Lampard has a greater perspective, and has built a life outside football. So he doesn't have the pressure of expectation, or risking his playing career over the tiniest of hiccups. He's a team player, and is happy to give his assistant every chance. What makes this story even more remarkable is that the assistant is none other than his little brother, Joey. Not only is he Lampard's brother, but he's also his manager! Oh, and he's als
