Q: Batch, Access, Excel, Find, and Replace I'm trying to write a batch script that replaces instances of a variable in an Excel file with a set value. I need a wildcard so I can do multiple instances at once. I know I need to use Find and Replace but I'm not sure how to set the wildcard. For example, if my file looks like this: A: One B: Two C: Three And I want to replace the variable 'A' with '$Target', I don't want to do this one by one by replacing 'A' with '$Target' in each of the lines like so: A: $Target B: $Target C: $Target In batch, I can do something like this: set file=test.xls set target=test1.xls (for /f "tokens=" %%a in ('findstr /i "A: " %file%') do (echo %%a | findstr /i /V /C:"%target%" /X /G:1 /E /C:"Replace this text with:" /V /C:^>^> "Replacement Text")) or (for /f "tokens=" %%a in ('findstr /i "A: " %file%') do (echo %%a | findstr /i /V /C:"%target%" /X /G:1 /E /C:"Replace this text with:" /V /C:^>^> "Replacement Text")) > newfile.xls But I only want to replace the text if it matches both A: and the value of my target variable and keep the rest of the text intact. Does anyone know how I can do this? A: The following for

The time now is 07:14:54 AM.Rechargeable lithium-ion cells have rapidly been developed and are now commonly used for rechargeable electrical energy storage and power sources, e.g. cellular phones, digital cameras, tablet computers, notebook computers, electric vehicles, and electric tools. Currently, graphite is widely used as an anode active material for the rechargeable lithium-ion cells. It has the advantages of being relatively low cost, lightweight, and having low electrochemical potential. However, graphite has inherent drawbacks as a lithium-ion anode active material. For example, its lithium intercalation potential is low and consequently, its specific capacity
