The Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers is an independent unit of the British Army that was formed on the Western Front in 1914, and saw action in the First World War. Tane: The Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers: The Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers are a British Army infantry unit based on the Western Front in the years 1914–1915. It is one of the most famous bands in Great Britain, and is regularly engaged in parades and public occasions. Tane, pronounced "Tahn", is the name of the Band. Their heraldic badge is a banner of three white roses on a red background. The Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers were formed at Gallipoli on 4 July 1915, to provide music for the men of the 5th Royal Scots Infantry and the whole 4th (Vermont) Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment as they advanced up the Peninsula, until the end of August. Modern parades of the Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers are carefully choreographed, with a military drum-line, piping section, and a military band, playing military marches. Full military brass arrangements are also used, with the Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers playing the British and Irish national anthem before each parade. The Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers are usually involved in public occasions and events where the Royal Family or the British Government wish to commemorate the official end of the First World War. Tane perform at the Royal Family's military funerals, including those of the three soldiers killed in the Ypres Salient in 1914, the first burial of British soldiers in the devastated area since the start of the war. Their accompaniment at the Royal Salute to the Forces at Buckingham Palace in 1914, in which the whole British military band performed patriotic songs, was well-received, and set the stage for the band's role in the First World War. Similar to the modern-day Band of the Royal Scots Fusiliers, is the Central Band of the Canadian Scottish Regiment. Notable features of this band include the rapid-fire firing of the weapons, the use of the Enfield rifles and light machine guns, and the use of improvised artillery, such as the steel pots of a stalled tanker truck. be an official track list, it is finally clear that production designer Nick Labo commissioned 4 different artists to produce original songs that would reflect the culture of each of the 5 different islands that are players in the game. The track list is as follows: Cliffside The songwriters (with production credit for Vivan Case) are locals to the Cliffside province, and hope to make you feel part of it all. They make use of the cliff side environment: with haunting structures and occasional brilliant cliff plunges.
