PES 2013 Full Version.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to icephobic coating compositions for glass, including outer laminates, which are durable in terms of remaining free from deposition of water and other substances during storage, and less affected by the seasonal variation of temperature. 2. Description of the Related Art Numerous proposals have been made to coat glass articles such as windows and mirrors to prevent the deposition of water and other substances onto the glass, which deposition results in cloudiness. Such a coating may be required for use as well, for example, for rain curtains, window materials, and laminates for windows. Known techniques for providing such coatings, which are transparent, include, for example, the formation of a thin film of a metal or an organic compound having a low surface energy on the glass substrate by vacuum evaporation or sputtering. JP-A-63-167734 describes a method for producing a protective film wherein a polyorganosiloxane resin film having a low softening point is formed on the surface of glass by coating the glass with a composition that is applied to the glass 1cdb36666d
