On August 25, 1971, a single bomb exploded, killing three people and wounding dozens. It was the first of many to rock the country that year. Seven more bombings in 1972 and 1973 culminated in a series of bloody terrorist attacks that rocked the United States. The post-Watergate scandals had exposed deep fissures in the fabric of government and the public's trust was fractured. Then, in 1973, the Watergate scandal took a dark turn as President Richard Nixon's administration sought to obstruct and cover-up the 1972 break-in at the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex in Washington, D.C. And so, the modern "Deep State" was born. Since that time, there has been an ever-increasing amassing of government employees who have betrayed their duty to the Constitution and to the American people. On July 19, 2014, Stephen Yates testified to the Select Committee on Intelligence (SCI), one of nine congressional committees, which is dedicated to conducting oversight of the Intelligence Community (IC). The largest branch of the U.S. federal government, the intelligence community consists of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the National Security Agency (NSA), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA), the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency (NGA), the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO), the National Security Council (NSC), the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI), and the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). In the course of reviewing President Trump's executive order on the protection of classified information, Yates addressed a number of issues, including the number of employees in the IC who have been given top-secret clearances. Yates indicated that as of August 31, 2017, there were over 7,000 intelligence community employees "sitting on top-secret clearances." He stated that more than 350 of these employees have been given the
