So this is basically what I need to do, if I can find a good way of doing this. A: You can try create your own CounterType like: / * The buildId is a String (representing a unique buildid) to identify * unique events. It is typically not used for diagnostic, it should be *

    user defined. */ CounterType.Builder
counterTypeBuilder = new CounterType.Builder( Scope.Global, Type.integer); c ounterTypeBuilder.setName(" buildId"); / * The minQuantum is the lowest possible event value we will count. */ CounterType.Builder minQuantumBuilder = new

```
CounterType.Builder(
Scope.Global, Type.long); min QuantumBuilder.setName("mi nQuantum"); / * The maxQuantum is the highest possible event value we will
count. */ CounterType.Builder
maxQuantumBuilder = new CounterType.Builder( Scope.Global, Type.long); max QuantumBuilder.setName("m

axQuantum"); / * The fieldName is the name of the field within the MBean. If not * provided then it will default to
"count" */
CounterType.Builder
fieldNameBuilder = new CounterType.Builder( Scope.Global, Type.String); fie ldNameBuilder.setName("cou nt"); / * The fieldType is the type of the CounterType. This is set to * "long" by default */

CounterType.Builder
fieldTypeBuilder = new CounterType.Builder( Scope.Global, Type.long); field
TypeBuilder.setName("count")
; / * The java.beans.Property ChangeListener allows application code to detect * and respond to changes in the

value of this CounterType. To use this * interface to add an EventListener, use the getPropertyChangeListener * method. * * @see #removePropertyChangeListener
