This proposal is directed at the use of peroxidase-antiperoxidase (PAP) technology for the detection and localization of tumor-associated antigens (TAAs) in paraffin-embedded tissue. The development of monoclonal antibodies, and the production of antiidiotypic antibodies, have made possible the production of reagents for the immunohistochemical detection and localization of TAA within tissue. Although the use of monoclonal antibodies and antiidiotypic antibodies as probes for the detection of tumor antigens has been extensively developed and investigated, the production of PAP reagents has remained essentially unchanged since ## their first development more than ten years ago. We seek to develop several new PAP reagents capable of specifically detecting 6d1f23a050
