George Osborne has had a revelation about the EU, but don't say you weren't told. Speaking at a private event in Bath, he told Sky News that he had "just realised" what Brexit was all about, jokingly saying it was a dog whistle for "the Wall of Berlin". His claim was made in response to a question about Boris Johnson, but also took in the impact of the Swiss referendum. He told the viewers: "The real answer to the question what is a country? There is a real difficulty in defining what a country is. "There is an old joke about there being an American song about how to ask a girl out, 'When you're driving down the street and a guy on a motorcycle goes past, what do you do? Ask them for directions,' and the answer is, 'Don't do that." Brexit-backing politicians are now lining up to claim that the remark shows a shift of position from the Remain camp. Former cabinet minister Stephen Crabb tweeted: "It appears @George_Osborne has been listening to the lies and exaggerations of Vote Leave, and is now realising what they were doing." Former minister Owen Paterson said: "I think it is quite revealing that the Chancellor has to say on this issue that 'I haven't really thought about it before'." Former International Development Secretary Andrew Mitchell added: "George Osborne now thinks he has Brexit". The context for the remark was a discussion about Boris Johnson, who is often described as a "Brexiteer" by his opponents. However, the Brexit vote will not kick in for two years and candidates have not been selected. Image: Boris Johnson is often called a 'Brexiteer' by opponents Government figures have previously dismissed Mr Johnson as a "Brexiteer" and "hard Brexit" supporter, but Mr Osborne and others have suggested the opposite. Asked if he had "any qualms" about his new prime minister, Mr Osborne replied: "On the detail? Not at all." He is also thought to have supported the idea of leaving the single market, but only in the "early days" of the campaign, while ministers have suggested the goal is now a "clean Brexit".
