... He walked through the woods, pushing the stubborn branches apart, and listening to the quiet rustling of the leaves. Everything was very ordinary. Birds were chirping in the branches; a light breeze carried the smells of earth, of wet, fresh grass. And yet, something was not right. He stopped and listened. Behind a thin shell of wood he heard voices, laughter, and even - shouts: - Where are you going? - To the river, where else. - You had just been there. - And I want to go again. - Well, if that's what you want... - Yes, I do! "Yes. For a long time it seems to me that they are waiting for me.
