Â.Vistaprint, a company that makes business cards and letterhead with nearly 90 percent share of the business card market, is giving publishers more ways to connect with consumers. The company introduced Papercut, a new feature that allows publishers to personalize a piece of paper with custom text, photos and sketches. In a short demo at BPM 17, featured this week at the New York International Auto Show, Vistaprint showed how papercuts could turn a brand's company letterhead into an individualized invitation for a corporate picnic. Cary Malkin, VP and chief marketing officer at Vistaprint, said the company has seen a huge increase in the use of papercuts as a way to promote a brand. For example, in 2014, the company teamed with PepsiCo to create nearly 50 papercuts. A printed invitation for the company's CEO, Indra Nooyi, included a photograph of the music legend Queen with her signature playing a guitar. In addition to selling more business cards, companies are finding that they can differentiate themselves by promoting their brand with unique pieces of paper. For example, Kraft Foods, maker of the Kraft Macaroni & Cheese brand, partnered with the paper and paperboard company FMG Paper to promote its latest cheese product using paper cuts. "There is a lot of this competition to be a differentiation market, a differentiation product," said Eric Hackelford, president of Vistaprint. "It's not the number
